LÉ Clíodhna editorial spot on:

Dear Editor, The Irish Examiner editorial, ‘Long overdue - LÉ Cliona crew finally honoured’ (Opinion September 2) is spot on. I am sure you will agree it was a team effort that enabled a satisfactory outcome to the LÉ Cliona project, and all are entitled to an equal share of the credit. More specifically the constructive analysis of the boiler room fire incident on board by your correspondent Seán O’Riordan during the campaign was of critical assistance. Indeed, over the years the Irish Examiner has facilitated ourselves to raise and debate various contentious issues surrounding the Shot at Dawn during WW1 and the experience of Defence Forces personnel blacklisted by the Irish Government following WW2, which ultimately assisted our efforts in the achievement of a beneficial outcome for those concerned. On this occasion... just to say thanks.
