

First Wreath Laying Sixty Years Later

Picture aboard the Greencastle Trawler Argo K on Tuesday 28th March 2000 at 1700 hours during the laying of two poppy wreaths some twelve miles north west of Tory Island. This was in memory of the Fleetwood men lost in the Dublin Steam trawler Leukos, sunk by a single shell from the German submarine U 38 on the evening of 9th March 1940. L. to R. Skipper Tommy McDaid, Patrick Kelly, Patrick McGilloway and Patrick Patton. Photo courtesy Peter Mulvany. With special thanks to Jim McClenaghan of the Foyle Fishermens Co-Op. for his assistance.
